HALLOWEEN SAFETY

Halloween is a fun and exciting time for both kids and adults. We have fun dressing up and channeling our inner child while taking our children door to door for tasty treats. Although it is a scary good time, there are a few safety precautions to be aware of in order to keep everyone safe.

COSTUME CAUTIONS

When it comes to choosing costumes for your little ones, make sure you are picking ones that fit your child properly in order to avoid tripping hazards. The last thing you want is a child-sized dragon running door to door and falling on the sidewalk. If the costume has a face mask, have the child try it on before going out, to ensure they are able to see properly. Not all costumes will reflect when oncoming cars are driving down the street, so ensure you add some reflective material or glow in the dark patches for the children, to be visible to vehicles passing by.

PROTECTIVE PET TIPS

Just like children enjoy Halloween, many pet owners want their pups to enjoy the celebration too! Four legged friends are always fun to bring along, especially when it's done safely. If you are bringing your furry best friend trick or treating with the family, ensure they are on a leash the entire time to avoid any accidents from happening. Don't forget to let them in on the costume action and dress them in properly fitting attire that will include reflective accessories for cars and people passing to see. If it's especially hot, make sure the costume isn't too overwhelming, causing them to overheat.

DRIVING SAFETY

Be mindful that families with children and pets will be out in full swing from dusk to dark. Ensure you are not going faster than the posted speed limit in neighborhoods and look both ways before turning. If you are choosing to drive the kiddos to different houses, make sure your emergency blinkers are working so you can pull off on the side of the road safely.

National Day of the Deployed

Jennifer Campbell Personal Experience

Contributed by Emily MacDonald
Layout by Lydeah Sheng

Facing deployment with family for the first time was an incredibly tough experience for Jennifer, her husband, and their now two-year-old child. They had to leave their familiar life in Texas and move to Florida, far away from friends and family. Just as they were adjusting to their new life in Florida, Jennifer's husband was sent on his first deployment. The initial days were particularly challenging for Jennifer as she found herself in a new place, unsure of how to handle household tasks or fix things when accidents occurred. She went through a rollercoaster of emotions, and in the beginning it was very lonely for her to be without her husband. When her little one saw someone in uniform, he would excitedly think it was their Dad, only to be disappointed when it wasn't. It was difficult to explain to her child that dad was away. As a stay-at-home mom, the responsibility of taking care of the house and her child weighed heavily on her shoulders.

As time went on, Jennifer became more motivated to find ways to distract herself and her child from the loneliness. With the help of Hurlburt's Military & Family Readiness Center (M&FRC), she was able to learn about all sorts of support programs, childcare assistance, and connections with other families going through deployments. The support group "Hurlburt Field Hearts Apart (Family of Deployed Service Member)" on Facebook was particularly helpful in connecting Jennifer with others who understood her situation. The deployment care activities, hosted by M&FRC, were a significant help and allowed not only her child to be entertained, but it is also where Jennifer got to meet others going through the same experience. She found solace in connecting with people who shared similar feelings and challenges, and they became like a second family.

Despite the physical distance, Jennifer and her husband worked hard to stay connected during the deployment. They utilized video chat, texting, and found fun activities to do together over long distances, such as watching movies simultaneously and discussing their day-to-day lives. Their shared love for fitness and pop culture, like Marvel and Star Wars, gave them common ground and allowed them to stay engaged in each other's lives. Jennifer was able to pick up the hobby of running, allowing her and her husband to track each other's running time, creating a little game of competitiveness and fun. Another big source of support came from her family, who would visit occasionally, giving her something to look forward to and making the deployment a bit easier and happier.

When Jennifer's husband left, their child was still so young. To keep their father-and-child connection strong, Jennifer would send pictures and videos to show the growth of their baby. Care packages would be sent including their son's old clothes, allowing her husband to see the baby's development, and he even had a favorite toy that was sent over and traveled with her husband to capture memories of the places he had been to share with their little one. In the end, their commitment to communication and mutual support helped them navigate the challenges of deployment and come out stronger as a family.

Jennifer emphasized that deployment is not easy and may not be for everyone, but getting into a routine and asking for help, as well as getting involved within the M&FRC, makes deployments more manageable. She stressed that it's okay not to be okay and encouraged people to ask for help. She mentioned the importance of reaching out to Key Spouses, utilizing Facebook groups, and making friendships within the military community. She encourages those who will be facing deployments for the first time to find new hobbies, and to remember the importance of self-care, such as going grocery shopping alone or treating oneself to spa days or buying new clothes, as self-care, vital for maintaining mental and emotional well-being.

Getting Connected with M&FRC

It is no secret that the demands of military life can be tough. When you walk through the doors of the Hurlburt Field Military & Family Readiness Center (M&FRC) you'll be greeted by a team ready to assist and guide you through all that military life has to offer!

M&FRC supports readiness and resiliency by helping DoD military, AFRes, ANG, DoD civilians, retirees, and eligible family members adapt to the demands of the Air Force through classes, programs, counseling, and coaching over a vast scope of topics including personal, family, financial, and military life. We broke down a few M&FRC programs for a quick overview of the programs and services M&FRC provides to our community.

Air Force Aid Society - Air Force Aid Society (AFAS) provides financial assistance for Air Force and Space Force families by specializing in zero interest loans for financial emergency situations. For instance, if your car engine blows out, your water heater stops working or even in situations where taking emergency leave can cause a financial strain, AFAS can help! To learn more, visit AFAS.org and the M&FRC staff can help navigate the nuances of the program.

Bundles for Babies - AFAS also funds Bundles for Babies, a class designed to teach soon-to-be and new parents basic parenting skills. After completing the class, parents will receive a gift card from AFAS to help purchase some of baby's first essentials.

Air Force Families Forever (AFFF)/Gold Star Families - The AFFF is a long-term aftercare program established to provide proactive outreach to family members who have lost a loved one that was, at the time of death, serving on Active Duty in the United States Air Force. This program's objective is to provide resources, support and information to help survivors adapt to life without their loved one providing referrals for private and group counseling, sources for support in the local community, and national support networks.

Air Force Wounded Warrior (AFW2) - M&FRC provides warriors and their families assistance in transition, employment, relocation, financial, as well as a variety of other areas of need.

Discovery Resource Center - The M&FRC's Discovery Resource Center is available for those who need access to computers with internet connectivity, telephone, fax machine, scanner, copier, and reference materials that are available for checkout.

Emergency Family Assistance Center (EFAC) - The M&FRC activates the EFAC upon direction from the Installation Commander. The EFAC serves as the focal point for victim and family assistance services after a natural disaster or man-made incident.

Employment Assistance Program & Spouse Employment Assistance Program - M&FRC counselors can assist clients with establishing career goals in the civilian work sector through classes such as Resume Readiness, The Art of Interviewing, Spouse Employment Ready, and more.

Exceptional Family Member Family Support Specialist (EFMP-FS) - This community support function provided by M&FRC is here to enhance the quality of life for family members with special needs by promoting self-sufficiency and resiliency. Some services offered are one-on-one consultations, education and support, respite care options, and EFMP family, child, and adult activities such as sensory-friendly movies and workshops.

Information & Referral - Think of M&FRC as your directory when you don't know who to call. M&FRC will get you connected with the proper channels to assist airmen and families, identify and clarify needs and determine appropriate forms of assistance. The M&FRC maintains a list of base and community programs and services to meet Airmen and family needs to include marriage and family needs, crisis intervention, childcare needs, employment, and spouse education.

Key Spouse Program (KSP) - The KSP is a volunteer-based unit commander's initiative that promotes partnerships with unit leadership and families through a Key Spouse, helping spouses stay connected with the unit and with each other through with information and activities while the active duty member may be down range.

Relocation Assistance Program (RAP) - When you're preparing to PCS, the M&FRC's Relocation Assistance Program can help with resources to ensure a smooth transition to your next duty location with offerings such as Plan My Move Class, Child Care for PCS, Sponsor Training Class, and online relocation tools. If you've PCS'd to Hurlburt Field, the RAP holds different classes to assist in settling into your new home like Heading to Hurlburt, Newcomer's Orientation, Welcome Spouse, and Coffee & Connections.

Transition Assistance Program (TAP) - TAP provides the preparation needed to ensure a smooth separation or retirement from the Air Force back to the civilian community.

Volunteer Resource Program (VRP) - The VRP is a clearinghouse to coordinate the volunteer efforts at Hurlburt Field by serving as an information source, a placement service, and as part of a referral network. Whether you are seeking professional job experience or a chance to help others, volunteering will provide the chance to document hours earned and to gain work experience for inclusion on your next job application or resume.

Military Family Life Consultants (MFLC) - The MFLC partners with service members, spouses and children to provide nonmedical counseling to assist in assessment, development, and decision making for life.

Personal Work Life - Promoting community wellness, this program assists with readiness in dealing with the demands of military life through one-on-one coaching as well as education classes, training, and groups for units.

Experiential Learning - This program offers outreach, team building and cohesion programs for both units and families such as Lego Serious Play, Four Lenses, True Colors, 7 Habits, facilitating ice breakers and more.

Personal Financial Readiness - The Hurlburt Field M&FRC has five (5) accredited financial counselors. They are here to assist and educate military members and families through different financial lifecycle programs as well as coaching and promoting financial wellness.

Deployment Resources - M&FRC has all of the deployment resources for single service members, those that are married, and families with children for preparing for deployment, coping with separation, and reintegration post deployment. M&FRC officiate mandatory briefings for those who are deploying, and a few briefings that spouses are welcome and encouraged to attend!

These examples are just scratching the surface of what the Hurlburt Field M&FRC's robust program can assist with to help you navigate through military life, whatever stage that may be!
